Is as the Grace House Training School for Deaconesses, a Protestant Episeopal institution under the direct supervision of Dr. Huntington; of Grace Chirch.

This is not as wide a departure as it might seem, for the work of a deaconess is to assist the blahop in work among the poor. The relation of this to her mother's work is allown in Mrs. Briggs's story.

Mrs. Briggs said to a reporter:

"Tam an active member of the league. Wy number is 1,933. So farmy work in the Salvation Army has taken the form of relies for the slum children. We have provided food and clothing for the slum children. We have provided food and clothing for the salvation of the sworld.

"What charms me about the army is the splandid organization and the abolite housety and sincerty of the solute house house he had a solute housety and sincerty of the solute house house he had a solute houset had a solute house he had a solute houset had been a solute house he had a solute

The resistance in getting any impertinent questions about beliefs or church allegiance. The way Barties and the laymen are oliged to admit that the army goes further down than the church to do good to lift up and to hold up the people who are in the depths.

"A neighborhood or a family cannot be saved by means of a prayer book or a Bible. People don't want Bibles, they wan soan and a scuttle of coal. When a missionary goes into a slum tenement-house she must have something more tangible than prayers for the mother and children she finds there in distress. The woman may have a sick baby. What she wants is a free doctor, who will not only prescribe for the little one but provide medicine, food and clothing—provide it in the way The Emerica World physicians do, without asking any impertinent questions about beliefs or church allegiance. The woman may have washing to do. What she wants is not a leaflet, but assistance in getting the clothes bolled and hung out on that laundry work her rent may depend."

"Lord Roosey."

Pat Roney's merry farce company, in Mr. Carroll's laughing festival, "Lord Roosey," will open a three nights' engagement at the Grand next Thursday. The play is one of the most successful comedy attractions on the road. The dialogue in "Lord Roosey" is said to possess more literary merit than is usually found in farce comedies. It is sparkingly witty and, without plot or play, would of itself be exceedingly enjoyable.

You cannot do effective work without a clear head, and for this take Simmons Liver Regulator.
